No volcanoes, fewer tower blocks – Ecuador lands a 'safer' airport for Quito

One of the world's most spectacular and stomach-churning aircraft descents will be consigned to history next week when Quito closes an airport wedged between volcanoes and tower blocks high in the windswept Andes.

Gagan Navigation Program faces new delay in India

The certification for India's GPS-Aided GEO Augmented Navigation (Gagan) project is presently being led by the Director General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) and, according to an official statement, is "expected to be operational in the summer of 2013." However, an Airports Authority of India (AAI) official, speaking on condition of anonymity, has told AIN the schedule is likely to be pushed back toward the end of the year.

Airlines expecting flight interruptions due to Northeast U.S. storm

With a major storm bearing down on the Northeast, several airlines are warning travellers to prepare for the possibility of flight cancellations, diversions, and delays Friday at Albany International Airport.

Airlines contend with big jump in Mumbai airport charges

Indian airport regulator AERA (Airports Economic Regulatory Authority) approved a 154% increase in aeronautical charges for airlines operating to the city's airport.

Blimps to hover in D.C. airspace

Two large tethered helium blimps carrying surveillance gear will be deployed for testing by the North American Aerospace Defense Command, known as NORAD, somewhere near Washington, D.C.'s airspace by the end of September, Reuters reported this week.

Frontier Airlines to outsource about 700 jobs

Frontier Airlines has told about 700 employees nationwide it will be outsourcing their jobs to other employers, which will affect all of its destinations except Denver International Airport.
